DAVID AND ANNA MATSON.

By Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway,

Editor "New Northwest," Portland, Oregon,

WITH BEAUTIFUL ILLUSTRATIONS, AND ELEGANTLY BOUNDS

A new epic, from a vigorous and skillful pen, on a subject which occupies a large place in the A new spir, from a vigorous and skillful pen, on a subject which occupies a large place in the social discussions of the day. The subject is taken from Mr. Whittier's short narrative of "David Matson," with which the reader is probably familiar. David Matson, a Merrimne salior, was captured by the Algorines (during one of his voyages) and sold into slavery. After many years he obtained release and was on his way to the home of his boybood, when he tell in with his old employer, who informed him that his wife, believing him dead, and remarried, and, stunned by his trouble, he surrendered all claim as husband and father to the man who had stepped into his place, and departed. Mrs. Durnivay has found a themse in this story with which her heart beats in warmest sympthy, and her lies a form of the place in the story with which her heart hearts in warmest sympathy, and her lines flow on in the sameth endered in-dicative of the fulfest accord. She pictures the gentle, tender, trustful Anna and the wily, cov-etous Pefatlah in vivid colors; and how years of poverty and longing, and the cries of the hun gry boys, compelled poor Anna to yield to Pelatiah's importunity. "Ring, rejoice My poor, unmated dove," said be, " And look henceforth for love to me,"

A little further on he says:

" Become my wife and you shall be Made happy through prosperity,"
White, if she persists in declining his advances, wulf-like, he threatens to abandon her to starvation and cold. And this Pelatiah was a "deacon," " In exhortations deep and lond," The wanderings of David, his captivity, release, hapless interview with Pelatiah, discovery of Anna's second wifehood, and his sad going back to Algeria, are all told so pathetically that nor feelings are deeply enlisted. No one, with any true scotiment, can read the poem without being thoroughly stirred. The illustrations are in admirable keeping with the passages they are designed to portray, and a fine engraving of the author is a filting frontispiece. The subject spirit, fire and passion of the poem should give it an extensive reading, aside from the interest which the literary reputation of the author must awaken in it. As a specimen of book-making the volume is certainly beautiful, and would adorn any center-table.

We know of no work so well adapted as a present. It is printed on heavy finited paper and most beautifully bound, price, $2.00; full gilt extra, $2.50. For sale by book-sellers, or by mail, post-paid, by S. R. WELLS & Co., Publishers, 737 Broadway, New York.
